Many of you will recognize Tammy from the web site. She was unzipped from a backpack in the elementary school hallway; her meowing catching the attention of a passing teacher. I was called and Tammy (named for my friend who rescued her) was given into my care. My vet guessed her age to be 3-5 days old. I bottled fed her and sweet talked my poodle into nursing her along with the puppies. That was twelve years ago. Tammy is still my constant companion, her perch of choice being the top of my monitor. She is a bit chubby and more often than not we call her FatCat. She has been known to fall off my monitor while sleeping. I got rather good at catching her! Although I have also had to replace keyboards (six or so now) that did not include a stress test of cats falling from the heaven. For awhile I had a gadget called a monitor shelf. It sat on top of my monitor and made a nice flat surface that Tammy was less likely to fall off of. The family referred to it as the "FatCat Butt Rack". Tammy is such a fixture in my computing and quilting life that it was only a matter of time before she got incorporated into it ☺ Which is how this pattern came to be!
